Michael Derchin

Founder
Derchin Airline Research, LLC

Michael W. Derchin (“Mike”) is widely regarded as one of the most respected and accomplished airline, aerospace, and space securities analysts of his generation. He is the founder of Derchin Airline Research, LLC, a consulting firm and family business comparable in scope to a mid-sized hedge fund. The firm publishes the weekly newsletter Heard in the Hangar, distributed to senior leaders across Wall Street and throughout the global aviation and space industries.

His 60-year career — spanning airline management and Wall Street — parallels the modern history of commercial aviation and aerospace. From the explosive growth of air travel in the 1950s and 1960s, through airline deregulation and successive waves of mergers and bankruptcies driven by terrorist attacks, pandemics, and financial crises, to today’s space pioneers such as Elon Musk of SpaceX, Peter Beck of Rocket Lab, and Will Marshall of Planet Labs, Derchin has analyzed and advised through every cycle.

His aviation career began serendipitously on a Greyhound bus in Ithaca, New York, during a March 1966 snowstorm, when a chance encounter with a Mohawk Airlines executive led to a part-time position in reservations. After completing doctoral coursework in business administration at Syracuse University, he returned to New York City to join American Airlines and Pan American World Airways in marketing planning and scheduling. There, he worked alongside industry legends including Pan Am founder Juan Trippe and Charles Lindbergh.

In the late 1970s, he worked under American Airlines CEO Bob Crandall, contributing to groundbreaking initiatives including the first Super Saver fares, early yield management systems, travel agency automation, and the launch of the industry’s first loyalty program.

Following deregulation and American Airlines’ relocation to Dallas, Derchin transitioned to Wall Street, where he became a top-ranked airline, aerospace, and transportation analyst at Oppenheimer & Co., First Boston, Drexel Burnham Lambert, and NatWest Securities. At NatWest, he managed a 90-person research department and led its global transportation analytical team.

He later joined Tiger Management, where he headed the global airline, aerospace, transportation, and travel team. Following Tiger, he founded Derchin Management LLC — one of the so-called “Tiger Cubs” — operating from the aftermath of 9/11 through the financial crisis before electing to return capital to limited partners rather than subject them to prolonged market volatility. He subsequently worked with several investment boutiques, FTN/ Horizon, CRT Capital, Sterne Agee, and Imperial Capital before founding his consulting firm and family business.

Derchin received his MBA in Finance and Investment from the Baruch School of Business Administration and his BA in Economics from Brooklyn College.

Fun Fact: Derchin sang backup on Bon-Jovi’s 1999 album Crush, where he also unleashed the primal scream in the song “One Wild Night”.
